Indie Book Award Winner for Best Memoir of 2012 and Finalist for Best Travel Book 2013. Teresa OKane had always longed to see the world. She owned scads of travel books and maps and was about to buy yet another bookcase to hold the many Lonely Planet guides and travel essays that she had accumulated over the years when she turned to her husband and said, Im tired of storing our dreams. Lets live them! Within a month, they bought one-way tickets to Morocco, leased out their home, and set out on a journey of the African Continent top to bottom from Casablanca to Cape Town. Transiting seventeen countries in 10 months, mostly by public transport, they explored wild, exotic, and historic locations they had only dreamed of and some they had never heard of. From sandy Timbuktu, to a tiny lemur populated island in Madagascar, the author embraces Africa. She strokes the manes of lions, contracts malaria (twice), flies a micro light over Victoria Falls, earns a level one certification as a South African safari guide, discovers...
