When General McCullough passed through Fayetteville, on his way to discomfiture and death at Pea Kidge, he expressed the wish, that North-western Arkansas was in a place, which we shall simply designate as more hot than holy. If character and calamity on the one hand, and the Bible on the other, can determine the post mortem condition of a human being, Ben McCullough, whilom somewhat famous as a Texan Ranger, is sealed with a fate that polemics cannot modify, and God will never change. Rabid secessionists have always disliked North-western Arkansas. Though bordering on the Cherokee line, it has been for years the intellectual centre of the State, with Fayetteville as the point from which its intelligence radiated. Settled principally by Kentuckians and Tennesseans, whose early teachings, under Henry Clay and Andrew Jackson, gave to their politics life, and to their loyalty...
